NATURAL PRODUCTS

FOR LIVING A FULL
AND ACTIVE LIFE

START A NEW AND BETTER LIFE!

WE FIRMLY BELIEVE THAT SELF-IMPROVEMENT, WHETHER IN MIND OR BODY, STARTS WITH ALL NATURAL SOLUTIONS.

It was with this mantra in mind that Siberian Health was born 20 years ago in Siberia. Staying true to our roots, Siberian Health now makes over 250 health and beauty products, marketing them globally via own Representative offices in 25 countries across the world.

Siberia is a unique region! More than 70% of its enormous territory is still untouched by civilization. Nowhere else can you find so many wild woods, mountains and steppes! The harsh climate managed to preserve this land from industrial encroachment. It is now one of the last strongholds of untamed nature in the world.

Pure and powerful plants growing in Siberia retain a remarkable power that helps them survive in the ruthless Siberian climate. And Siberian Health is working hard to preserve in its products this untamed energy of nature.

WE ARE DEDICATED TO IMPROVING YOUR LIFE AND THE LIFE OF YOUR FAMILY, WHILE MAINTAINING THE NATURAL BEAUTY OF SIBERIA, ONE OF THE LAST UNSPOILED PARTS OF THE WORLD.

WELCOME TO THE WORLD OF SIBERIAN HEALTH!

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME

The natural world has been the key to our success, so it is only fair that we give back as much as we take. We cannot just indifferently watch how the forests and rivers are polluted, plants and animals disappear. Charitable Foundation "The World Around You" founded by Siberian Health is an active participant of the environmental protection events in the countries where the Company is present.

AT THE FOREFRONT OF CONSERVATION

CONSERVATION IS THE VERY CORNERSTONE OF OUR PHILOSOPHY. THE SECRET TO PHYSICAL AND MENTAL HEALTH STEMS FROM THE NATURAL WORLD, SO IT IS ONLY NATURAL THAT WE CARE DEEPLY ABOUT THE ENVIRONMENT.

We have installed modern equipment to cleanse the water and air at our production facilities.

In conjunction with this, we also insist on using the very best biodegradable materials in our products and packaging.

We absolutely prohibit the use of synthetic fillers in our products — no fumed silica, magnesium stearate or calcium stearate are used at our facilities.

In addition, we avoid using sulfates, phthalates, parabens, mineral oils, synthetic flavors and dyes in our products.

WE BELIEVE IN ALL NATURAL!

THE SCIENCE BEHIND THE SCIENCE

Not only are all our products manufactured in Siberia from indigenously grown herbs, but they are also formulated at our on-site Research and Innovation Center.

In collaboration with leading research and development institutions around the world, Siberian Health conducts a vast array of clinical trials for dietary supplements and other product lines.

Siberian Health is proud to have its own up-to-date manufacturing facilities which are GMP, ISO 9001, HACCP certified.

RESEARCH FOR THE BETTER TOMORROW

HERE ARE SOME OF THE BRANCHES OF SCIENCE THAT WE ARE ENGAGED IN:

ENDOECOLOGY

The science that studies and develops the ways and means of cleaning and maintaining the internal environment of the body.

ADAPTIVE MEDICINE

The research and study of plants with unique adaptogenic properties that help improve overall protection and maximise the effectiveness of virtually all human organs and systems.

CHRONOBIOLOGY

The science that studies the genesis, nature, principles and importance of biological rhythms and the way they relate to human health.

A GLIMPSE INTO THE WORLD OF SIBERIAN PURE HERBS

KURIL TEA

Pentaphylloides fruticosa

This famous herb is named after the Kuril Islands, where sailors used it instead of common tea. However, the Baikal people knew of its cleansing properties long before. They say that it was dogs that taught people how to use this herb. Seriously sick animals with poisoning sought out this herb because it offered them relief. Since then local people have always used it to alleviate any indigestion.

SIBERIAN THOROUGHWAX

Bupleurum sibiricum

The local Buryat people call this herb Hare's Ear due to the shape of the plant's leaves, which resemble a small hare's ear. Thoroughwax is one of the most revered herbs both in Chinese and Buryat-Tibetan medicine. But whereas in China they use only roots, Buryat people use mostly the aerial parts of Thoroughwax which are far richer in active ingredients especially relating to the digestive system.

LINGONBERRY

Vaccinium vitis-idaea

This small shrub plant with pink to purple berries keeps its hard lacquered leaves alive during the entire Siberian winter. Covered with a several foot layer of snow, it can tolerate temperatures as low as -50°C (-58°F) or even lower.

SABERWEED

Comarum palustre

Every autumn after the first frost, Siberian women went to gather cranberries from the marshes and swamps to provide their families with vitamins for the upcoming winter. Standing in the frigid water, they often developed serious joint pain. The ancient remedy they have been using up until now is a small marsh herb, known as Altai saberweed.

HORSETAIL

Equisetum arvense

It contains up to 10% of natural silicon, which is used to build the inner 'skeleton' of the plant. Together with the tubular stem it makes Horsetail one of the hardiest grass plants.

GARDEN BURNET

Sanguisorba officinalis

These tall plants with very unusual deep red cones look like a very exotic decoration of mainly green Siberian meadows. Local people believed that this strange color is due to the ability of this plant to 'drink' blood and named it accordingly – 'blood drinker' as translated from the local language.

SIBERIAN OREGANO

Origanum vulgare

Oregano is in a wide use for culinary purposes. And although the Siberian people rarely use it for seasoning as people in Europe or the USA do. They use Oregano together with Thyme for preparing a very aromatic herbal tea, which they frequently drink instead of common tea. Siberian oregano is the champion among all the existing species of Oregano as regards antioxidant activity.

BAIKAL SKULLCAP

Scutellaria baicalensis

One of the rare examples where an indigenous plant of Lake Baikal has become famous all over the world. Thanks to traditional Chinese medicine, which uses Baikal Skullcap for a wide range of conditions due to its surprisingly diverse and multifaceted effects, this plant is now also widely used in Western medicine.

SIBERIAN RED ROOT

Hedysarum sibiricum

Red Root is a mountain plant, which is native to Southern Siberia. It was traditionally used by Siberian hunters to maintain better physical endurance during long and often exhausting hunting expeditions.

GOLDEN TANSY

Tanacetum vulgare

Imagine the most beautiful and fashionable jewelry — a cluster of artistically engraved minute golden hemispheres ornamented with bright emerald. It's Golden Tansy — one of the most beautiful medicinal herbs in the world! But Siberians have always appreciated Golden Tansy for its ability to protect the liver from various stresses.

SIBERIAN ROSE HIPS

Rosa dahurica

Although Rose Hips are well-known on every continent, it is often misunderstood that there are lot of sometimes very different species of this common plant. Siberian Rose shrub is distinguished by its almost black twigs and deep red round-shaped fruits that make for a very beautiful contrast.

SIBERIAN THYME

Thymus serpyllum

Opposite to the common thyme which grows very densely and up to 2 feet high, Siberian thyme usually clings to mountain rocks and so it's much smaller, with fewer leaves however with many more flowers that are needed to attract insects that are so rare in the cold Siberian mountains.

A GLIMPSE INTO THE WORLD OF SIBERIAN PURE HERBS

SIBERIAN GOLDEN ROOT

Rhodiola rosea

Rhodiola rosea or Siberian golden root is the most widespread plant-adaptogen in Siberia. Unlike maral root and eleuthero, golden root grows much farther to the North than any other adaptogenic plants at an altitude of 3,000-5,000 feet. And due to the harsh habitat it is extremely frost-resistant and can endure: up to -76 °F!

SIBERIAN GINSENG

Eleutherococcus senticosus

A famous Siberian scientist I. Brekhman conducted years of studies on various native Siberian plants, trying to find a replacement for Red Ginseng as a stimulant. He wanted to find a new herb that would increase resistance to any stress, and do so without side effects. All of these qualities were found in Eleutherococcus root which was soon called Siberian Ginseng.

SIBERIAN ARALIA

Aralia mandshurica

Teas, and in more recent times alcohol tinctures as well, made from the bark, roots, and flowers of this thorny shrub were historically used in Siberia to treat fatigue, physical and lack of sexual vigor and headaches. Together with Siberian ginseng and Golden root, Aralia is now considered as one of the most famous Siberian adaptogenic plants.

MARAL ROOT

Leuzea carthamoides

Leuzea carthamoides or maral root is a favorite plant of marals (type of Siberian deer that inhabit the Altai mountains). Long time ago local people noticed that marals often fed on the roots of Leuzea when exhausted, that's why it was given such a name – maral root. Indeed, this is a very powerful adaptogen and is known for its high content of ecdysterone – a natural anabolic.

SIBERIAN LARCH

Larix sibirica

Young twigs and branches of this tree contain a unique antioxidant – dihydroquercetin. It's a close relative of another well-known antioxidant – quercetin, but due to some differences in its chemical structure, dihydroquercetin possesses significantly higher antioxidant properties.

SIBERIAN RAMSONS

Allium ursinum

Siberian bears like to dig for the bulbs of this small plant with a very strong garlic-like scent, and that is the reason for its Latin name, which is translated as "bear's onion". The local people also knew about its rich vitamin content and harvested large amounts of its leaves and stems to preserve by salting for long winters.

CHAGA MUSHROOM

Inonotus obliquus

Chaga is a mushroom that grows for decades on old birch trunks and can reach up to 1 feet in diameter. Siberian shamans believed that these mushrooms accumulated the sacred energy of the Earth which they used for centuries for strengthening the body and the mind. However, they always warned people to be careful when harvesting Chaga because of the danger of being shocked by the dramatic energy that could be released.

SIBERIAN ANGELICA

Angelica archangelica

The fluted stem of this plant can easily reach 6 feet in height and its fragrant flowers form a huge "umbrella" up to 4-5 feet in diameter. And thus it is one of the biggest grassy plants in Siberian forest. The local people used to drink its sweet and fragrant sap, which is accumulated within its hollow stem in large amounts.

SIBERIAN SEA-BUCKTHORN

Hippophae rhamnoides

These small bright orange berries contain possibly the highest amount of bio-available beta-carotene, and not only in Siberia, but on the whole planet. "Bio-available" means that sea-buckthorn beta-carotene is already dissolved in natural oil and thus is ready to be absorbed by the body in contrast to most of all the other beta-carotene sources that lack natural oil or fat.

BERGENIA

Bergenia crassifolia

This plant, which is also known as badan or Siberian tea, has very thick and hard leaves that can survive during even the most severe winters. In spring and summer these old leaves undergo natural self-fermentation and become dark and dry. The local people gather them to brew a very aromatic and tonifying tea.

SIBERIAN CEDAR

Pinus sibirica

This is one of the tallest trees in Siberian forests. It reaches up to 150 feet in height and its trunk can reach 7 feet in diameter. Siberian Cedar is also a symbol of longevity, having an astounding life span of up to 500-700 years. The seeds of Siberian Cedar are a very important staple in the diet of the locals.

ZIZIPHORA

Ziziphora bungeana

Coming home to their yurts and to a hot mug of Ziziphora tea with a pat of yak butter floating on top after a hard day of wolf hunting on horseback with berkuts (the big Siberian eagles they hunt with) is an ancient tradition of Altai nomads. They believed that Ziziphora invigorates the heart and nourishes the blood.

A GLIMPSE INTO THE WORLD OF SIBERIAN PURE HERBS

SIBERIAN FIR

Abies sibirica

This tall evergreen tree is famous for its resin. Unlike pines or cedars, the trunk of the fir tree has a very thin, soft and smooth bark studded with numerous little resin swellings. The indigenous people used to prick these swellings with a needle or a knife and then gather the outflowing resin to use it for healing wounds.

SIBERIAN JUNIPER

Juniperus sibirica

For centuries the Siberian people knew about the antibacterial and antifungal properties of Juniper, which is very rich in volatile oils. They brewed its young twigs in boiling water and then with this hot infusion they washed the barrels that they used for preserving food during the long winters.

GUELDER ROSE

Viburnum opulus

These very sour berries are considered to be non-edible in most countries where this plant grows. However, since food resources are scarce in Siberia, local people learned how to process these berries and use them as a popular stuffing for traditional Siberian pies.

SIBERIAN CRANBERRY

Vaccinium oxycoccus

Wild-growing Siberian cranberry contains a high amount of antioxidants. Although it's not only the chemical composition that is different. Siberian cranberries even look quite different from their American counterparts. These berries are smaller and thicker, with a much more intense aroma, and they taste sour, not sweet.

COLTSFOOT

Tussilago farfara

Translated from a local language the name of this plant means "mother-and-stepmother." It is because the upper surface of its leaves is smooth and it feels cold upon touching it, while the opposite side is velvety-furred and pleasantly warm.

SIBERIAN WINTERGREEN

Chimaphila umbellata

Translated from several languages in different countries the name of this small forest plant means "winter-loving." The reason is that this is one of the rarest evergreen grassy plants in northern forests including those in Siberia.

AMUR CORK TREE

Phellodendron amurense

Along with the famous ginkgo biloba, the Amur Cork Tree is a relict tree, which means that it existed on the Earth before the Ice Age when most primeval plants had already died. The bark of this tree is highly revered in traditional Chinese medicine as a multi-purpose medicine.

SIBERIAN FIREWEED

Chamerion angustifolium

This was a very important plant for the local Siberian population. The leaves of Fireweed can undergo natural fermentation, much like real tea, and thus they were in wide use for centuries as an excellent substitute for common tea.

ARNICA

Arnica montana

This plant prefers alpine meadows and can easily grow at altitudes of up to 9000 feet. Arnica is one of the most potent "cardiovascular" herbs on the planet, however, it is rarely used now because it grows very sparsely and high up in the mountains which makes harvesting very difficult.

SIBERIAN FLAX

Linum usitatissimum

People in Siberia have historically used Flax fiber as a substitute for the more expensive cotton. But since a lot of Flax seeds were always left over after processing, they learned to extract the oil from the seed and use it for food. Modern scientists discovered the heart-protecting properties of Flax seed oil only towards the end of the 20th century.

SIDEBELLS WINTERGREEN

Orthilia secunda

Translated from a local language the name of this small evergreen herb means "women's forest herb." It is because this plant was historically used for treating female infertility.

SIBERIAN SAW-WORT

Saussurea pygmaea

In order to evade the ruthless mountain sun and dehydration this plant developed several very specific features. It is densely furred with woolly hairs and all its stems and roots are closely tangled together to form a dense mass in the form of a hemisphere, which local people name "witch's rings".
